Background

The Backcountry Lodges of British Columbia Association (BLBCA) is a member directed association comprised of representatives from 29 privately owned lodge operations located throughout the major mountain ranges of British Columbia, Canada. Member backcountry lodge operators offer access to a wide range of self-propelled, multi-season recreational pursuits in remote, wilderness environments.

The BLBCA was created in 2004 to unify, represent and support member lodge owners and operators in the areas of safety, marketing, operations and government regulations as it strives to position the backcountry of British Columbia as one of the most rewarding adventure travel destinations in the world.
